

Lucy Chicken

Written by Administrator

Tuesday, 29 December 2009 15:43 - Last Updated Tuesday, 29 December 2009 15:54

This week we're featuring a very special chicken named Lucy, who lives on a farm in Half Moon Bay, California. She's one hard-working lady... not only does she scratch all day for bugs, but once a week she meets kids who have never seen anything like her before. The kids get to hold her, pet her, and learn about her life on the farm. She's part of a non-profit outdoor education program for low-income urban youth.

Lucy's portrait was made with hand-carved blocks and was hand-printed. To see more chicken prints, learn more about the chickens, and learn more about the artist Rigel Stuhmiller and her printmaking process, please visit chickenaweek.com. Have a chicken you'd like to feature? Send an email to rigel@chickenaweek.com
m